Review: A competently prepared compendium of basic official directives, announcements, and reports on the early stages of labor-management conferences to settle wage questions and to increase production in key commercial and industrial areas of Shanghai and Tientsin. Included are the directives of the Central People's Government regarding the establishment of Labor-Management Consultative Conferences, regulations on the establishment of said conferences as announced by the Shanghai Military Control Committee, as well as reports on the first such conferences held in East China, followed by reports on conferences at Peiping, Tientsin, and Shanghai.

Gives several case studies on the operation and results of conferences held in silk weaving mills, steel factories, food processing plants, and in dyeing and weaving establishments in Shanghai and Nanking as published in newspaper articles.
